

Announcement of Naresuan University
on “Guidelines for Teaching and Working as Preventive Measures Against Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) Pandemic”
(2/2021)

With the spread of COVID-19 in a vast number of provinces and infected cases have significantly increased, Naresuan University hereby announces the following measures to cope with the pandemic:

1. Cessation of conventional teaching is to be extended until January 31, 2021, and online or distant learning will be the only mode of teaching delivery.
2. For professional training/training under cooperative education project, it is advised that Faculties/Schools strictly continue in line with COVID-19 preventive measures.
3. Dormitories for staff and students are to be closely investigated; cleaning of areas and shared equipment and apparatus, including arranging for better ventilation in the place will be regularly conducted. Respecting distancing among individuals has to be strictly practiced.
4. All staff members and students must fill out both the NU Screening Form and relevant form(s) issued by the Phitsanulok Provincial Health Office as directed by the university.
5. Those who have track records of making contacts with either fragile cases or infected cases or having fever, cough, sore throat, running nose, and hyposmia/anosmia are advised to head to Acute Respiratory Clinic (ARI Clinic) of the Naresuan University Hospital on office hours from 08.00-16.00.
6. It is strictly recommended staff members and students cancel or delay traveling beyond Phitsanulok border unless a strongly sound reason is given and approved by Deans/Directors of Schools/Directors of Divisions.
7. Faculties/Schools/Faculty Equivalent Unit(s) come up with Work from Home (WFH) measures by initiating selective working hours (primarily based on 8-hour office hours), social distancing, et cetera.

Effective on January 9, 2021.

Announced on January 5, 2021.

(Honorary Prof. Dr. Kanchana Ngourungsi)
President of Naresuan University
